Business Policy

CONTRARY to popular opinion, the manufacture and sale of jewelry, silverware, watches, etc., has become more a science, than a business. The jeweler must be in close contact with developments in markets from which his materials come; he must be well versed in precious and semi-precious stones and their handling; he must have the keenest of eyes for perfection and imperfection in gems and purity and impurity in precious metal. First and foremost his integrity must be unquestionable as the respect of his customers is as great a part of his stock in trade as his merchandise.

By and large, the average layman making his selection of an article of jewelry, silverware or a watch, cannot distinguish the false from the true and must rely on the jeweler implicitly. Such responsibility has transformed his business into a profession.

In the fifteen years that have passed since the inception of this company, our activities have been based upon this conviction and what measure of success we have had may be attributed to it. We will continue this policy in the future by giving our customers courtesy and service; by maintaining the highest level of craftsmanship and artistry; and by pricing our merchandise in keeping with its value.

important...

ELSEWHERE in this book, will be found a short history of diamonds that concerned their discovery, mining, uses, etc., but on this page we come to probably the most important information about them, i.e. the four essentials that determine their value as gems. Possibly, the importance of these points can be best appreciated when it is considered that a cut and finished diamond maintains its rough condition value even though it may lose ½ its weight while in work. These four qualities are described as follows in order of precedence.

#1 PERFECTION—Indicates a diamond that is flawless in every particular, that is, the stone is completely free of carbon spots or white inclusions known as "feathers".

#2 COLOR—There are a number of tints in diamonds; a light brown, yellow, white and blue. Of these tints, a definite steely blue is the rarest and most sought after.

information...

#3 PROPORTION or MAKE—A stone should be so shaped that 2/5 of its weight is above its widest part or girdle and 3/5 below. A shallow stone lacks the necessary depth to produce the proper refraction of light that gives it brilliance.

#4 CUTTING—Illustrated here are the four most popular styles of cut diamonds, showing various sizes. The figures shown below each stone represent the weight, in carats, of a diamond of that size. Figures after the decimal points indicate hundredths of a carat.

The round cut is most in demand. It has the greatest brilliance as its 58 facets or flat surfaces are cut to produce the greatest light refraction.

The rectangular or Emerald cut is more or less an innovation developed to provide distinction and novelty but, as can readily be seen in the illustration, a stone cut in this style does not appear to be as large as a round cut diamond of identical weight.

The oval shaped or Marquise diamond equals the round cut in brilliance and beauty.

The fourth cutting shown, the Baguette, has numerous uses, lending itself admirably to any design in which diamonds are used, such as watch cases, dinner rings, brooches, bracelets and clips.

repair. . .

This department is prepared to repair everything from French marble clocks and mantel ornaments to the finest and most delicate watches at a very moderate fee. A battered compote or candlestick that has been tossed aside as gone beyond recall, can often be salvaged with results that surprise even ourselves.

remodeling . . .

THE reclamation of anything that is apparently out-worn, old fashioned or useless is always gratifying but nothing is more worthy of reclamation than old jewelry. Almost every home, every safe-deposit box boasts a dust collector in the form of Grandmother's engagement ring, brooch or earrings, Grandfather's pearl stick-pin or dress watch-fob, and all of them discarded because they are old fashioned.

Remodeling is the perfect way to reclaim them—their gems are not old-fashioned; neither is their precious metal—Grandmother's engagement ring may well furnish the material for Granddaughter's wedding ring; her brooch material for a clip; and enhance both their real and sentimental value as well.

Illustrated at the left are several examples of what can be accomplished; a brooch, practically an antique, transformed into a magnificent clip, an old stick-pin and ring furnished the essentials for a handsome ring of the latest design, and at the right, an old ring becomes a new ring.

Remodeling at our hands receives the same fine treatment and craftsmanship as our best merchandise. We, too, take pride in transforming your outmoded jewelry into things of modern beauty.

story of diamonds...

Since man's early history, diamonds have been one of his most cherished possessions. He has fought for them, died for them, spent lifetimes seeking them; their acquisition has been incentive for murder and bloodshed; their protection inspiration for heroism. Their value has supported empires and their rare beauty and brilliance have been the envy of Kings.

The earliest written mention of diamonds occurs in the Book of Exodus of the Old Testament (1700 B.C.) and the earliest records place the start of mining in India about 800-600 B.C. India was the sole producer of the gems for the next 1200 years or more when they were discovered in small quantity in Borneo about 600 A.D. However, the Indian variety held undisputed sway for almost 2500 years until diamonds were found in Brazil. Important diamond production in Brazil suffered a stormy career, beset by all sorts of political interference, racketeering and chicanery, and was not destined to last, for the discovery of fine gem stones in South Africa marked the beginning of an indus-

Special Orders

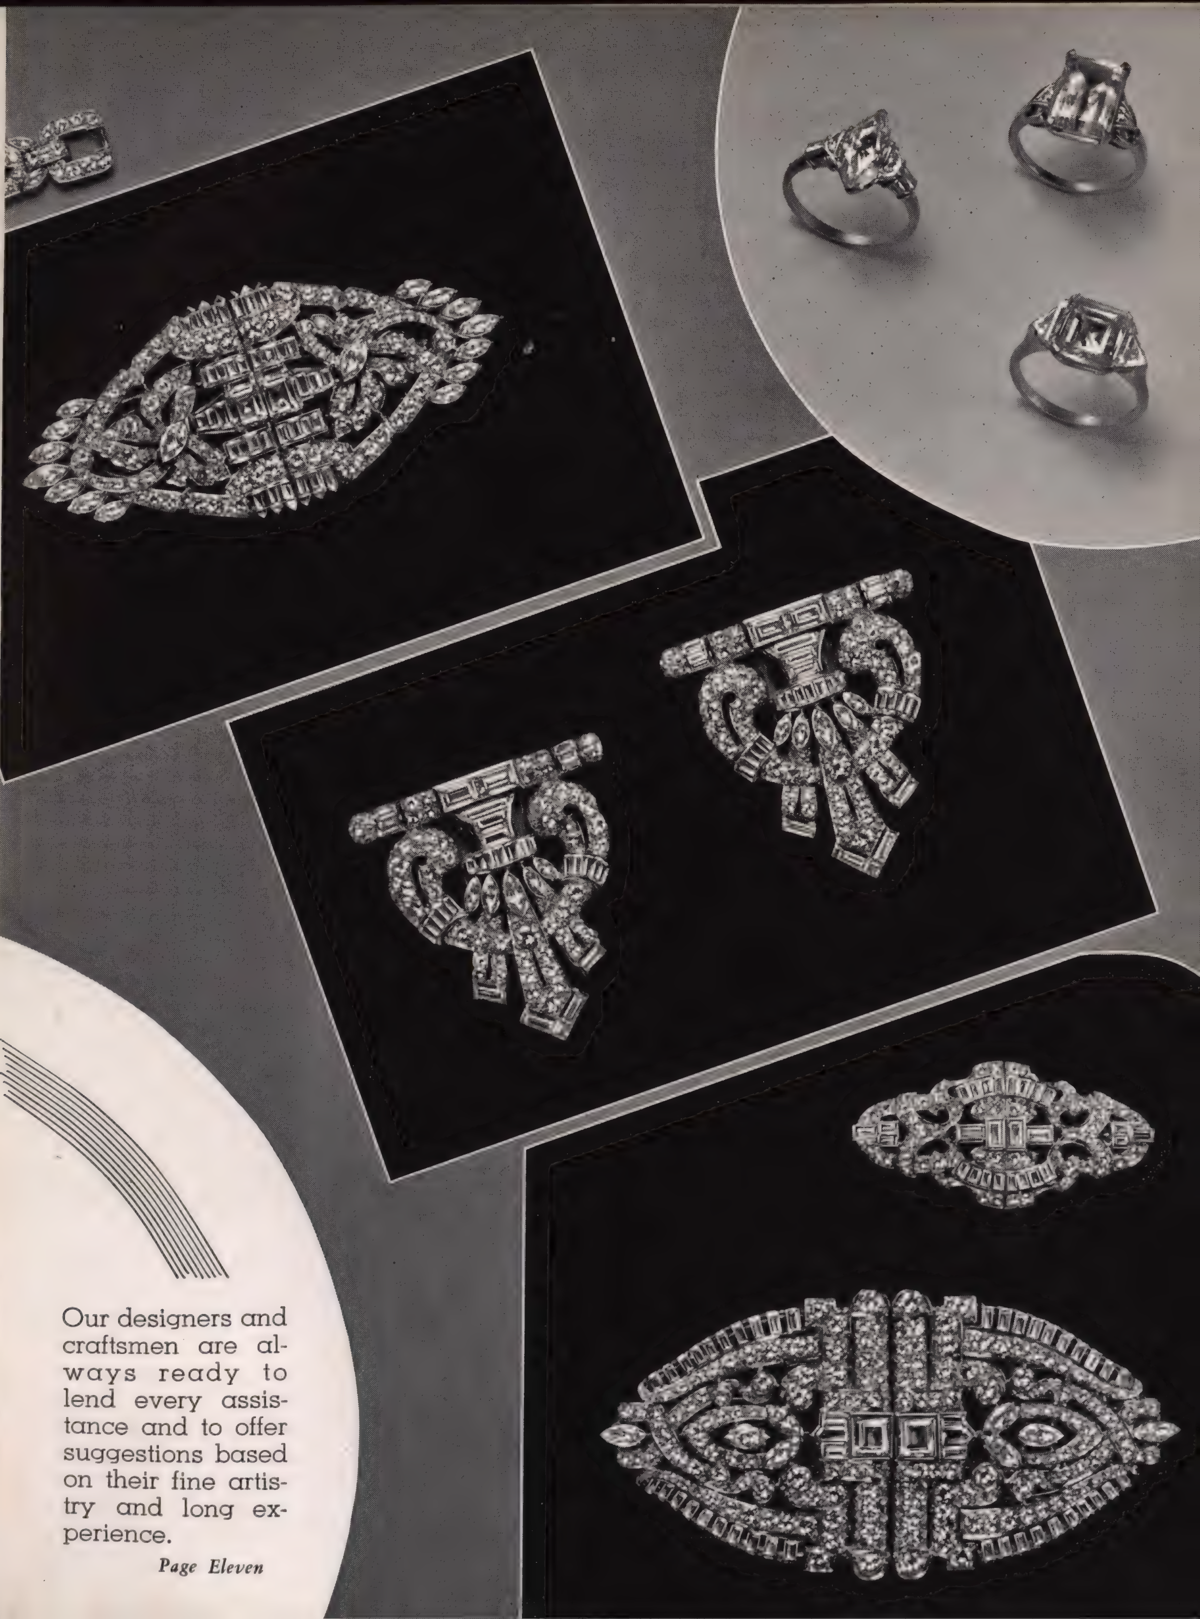
Nothing is so great a source of pride as the things made or designed by one's self and jewelry executed from one's own design or idea is always a constant delight • Unfortunately, many such thoughts are often dismissed as pipe dreams, far too expensive, when in actual fact, custom made jewelry costs no more than stock. In both cases, all gems are cut by hand for each individual piece and the settings are worked in the same manner. Hence the cost is determined solely by taste. Special orders receive our closest attention and cooperation.



Our designers and craftsmen are always ready to lend every assistance and to offer suggestions based on their fine artistry and long experience.

Diamond Engagement Rings

The gift of a ring as an engagement present is a custom that persists from ancient times. At one time an engagement or betrothal had as much or more importance than the wedding that followed and the ring was the bond that cemented the match. Although an engagement is not considered in quite the same light to-day, the symbolism of the ring is the same.

An engagement ring is always a prospective bride's most cherished possession. It is the first symbol of the tender affection and loyalty that will be a life-long inspiration. With this in mind, we have designed a selection of rings that are indeed worthy of their purpose. (Illustrations actual size)

Wedding Rings

The custom of the wedding ring is one that has come down to us from centuries, and has always had the same symbolism; a bond of enduring love and fidelity.

The wedding ring was first used in Ancient Greece and has been carried on since, being adopted by the church when marriage became a religious rite under Leo III. Until modern times, wedding rings were restricted to plain metal but a change of sentiment has allowed us to design a number of exquisite rings set with gem stones that are as great a source of pleasure as the event they are destined for.

Story of Diamonds

try that supplies three-quarters of the world's diamonds at the present time and which maintains a rigid control over the world's markets.

The formation of diamonds remained a mystery until recent years when geologists determined that they are essentially pure carbon hardened and crystallized under terrific volcanic heat and pressure. This is borne out by the fact that they are found in lava-like river bed deposits and in pipes of "blue ground" miles deep, clearly the result of volcanic action countless centuries ago. Previous to the discovery of diamonds in dry ground in South Africa, all diamonds had been panned from river bed deposits. South African underground mining developed when early pit mining became too hazardous and is now carried on with the most modern and efficient methods.

At its name, which has the same derivation as the word "adamant", indicates, the diamond is by far the hardest substance known. For this reason, its value is not restricted to gem stones alone; in fact, about 50% of them find industrial uses as cutting points for rock drills, lathes, granite saws, grinding wheel truing tools, etc. In fact a series of diamond dies used for drawing copper wire will withstand wear during the production of some 4 or 500,000 miles of wire. However, despite their phenomenal hardness, diamonds if struck in certain positions, will shatter with a sharp blow, since they have a grain as in wood.

Industrial diamonds do not approach the value of gem stones, because of flaws, poor coloring or other imperfections which make them unfit for gem purposes.

Whatever its use, the diamond, by its very nature, has earned its position as Peer of all Gems. Its matchless beauty and breath-taking radiance justly make it one of the most highly prized possessions of mankind and nature's most magnificent handiwork.

The Story of Gems

Spinning a web of legend and romance about themselves in their progress through the ages, precious gems have captured the imagination of each successive generation of mankind. Their extraordinary beauty has made them one of his most treasured and cherished possessions, one which he has held in reverence and awe. This reaction to such beauty is inevitable when one encounters the breath-taking magnificence of precious gems, their blinding brilliance and color.

In the short "biographies" which follow will be found the sources and standards of value and legends which surround each gem mentioned. It is our earnest hope that this information may serve to heighten appreciation of the loveliest of the earth's treasures.

EMERALD

The emerald, through all its history seems to have been a woman's stone. It was considered the gem of the goddess Venus and was Cleopatra's favorite. To it were attributed many properties such as a cure for epilepsy and eye troubles. The last has some basis, as the color green is restful for the eye.

Previous to the discovery of emeralds in Colombia by invading Spaniards, their source was unknown. However, the rediscovery in the last century, of mines in Egypt, supposed to have been the property of Cleopatra, explains it. Others have been found in Russia and Brazil, but it is generally conceded that Colombian emeralds, grass green in color, are the finest.

The emerald is a hard stone, but surprisingly lacking in durability. An emerald free from any cracks or imperfections is practically unknown.

It is the birthstone for May.

RUBY

The ruby, called the "Gem of Gems" by the Hindus, is one of the loveliest of precious stones. Discovered in Burma, Siam and Ceylon, they immediately became highly prized and jealously guarded.

The value of a ruby is largely determined by its color, pigeon's blood red being considered the best. (Large stones of this quality, if free of imperfection, command a higher price per carat than any other known gem.)

Many superstitions have been attached to the ruby ever since its discovery; at various times it has been believed to bring health, wealth, happiness, wisdom, to protect one from all danger and to be an emblem of love.

The birthstone for July.

SAPPHIRE

Blood brother to the ruby, the sapphire, contrary to general belief, is found in almost every color, and with the ruby is the hardest colored stone known; they both are most durable and keep their polish well, making them ideal for ring gems.

As in the ruby, color determines the value of the sapphire; a soft corn-flower blue being the most desirable. Misnomers applied to Sapphires other than blue, such as Oriental topaz and amethyst have not helped either stone.

The star sapphire, so called because of three bisecting light marks, forming six points, is most highly prized in spite of a slight opacity caused by these marks. Arabs have considered it a potent good luck charm, the sight of one sufficing to assure a smooth future.

Symbol of truth and constancy, a large number of blue sapphires are found in Siam and Ceylon and in some quantity in Australia, Burma and Montana.

PEARL

Known and highly prized from time immemorial, the pearl is truly the Aristocrat of Gems; worshipped by Ancient Hindus, the favorite of Ancient Egypt, Persia and Rome, it remains to this day the choice of fastidious people the world over.

The sea has given mankind much but nothing to equal the pearl. Found in oysters and mussels, they are caused by an irritant such as a grain of sand which pierces the shell and lodges in the skin. By the emission of a secretion that is their only protection, the mollusks cover the irritant and add layers to it, forming a pearl. Since these layers determine the beauty and sheen of a pearl, they largely determine its value. Superior gems depend on the health of the mollusks, the purity of the water, and freedom from imperfections. Roundness and size are also important factors.

Although a few magnificent pearls have been found in fresh water, principally in the tributaries of the Mississippi, the great majority of fine gem pearls come from salt water in the Orient, the South Seas, Australia and the Caribbean Sea.

The pearl has only one use, adornment. Their rare beauty and delicacy, in any setting, makes them eminently fitted to their purpose.

GARNET

Garnet, suffering from a poor reputation given it by those who associated it with cheap and tawdry jewelry, is very little appreciated in spite of its fine qualities.

Although it is relatively inexpensive, garnet is adaptable to any setting and its color makes it particularly desirable. 'Tho found in all countries, the finest garnet is that of Arizona, Utah and South Africa; Czechoslovakia is the only producer of sufficient quantity to support an industry.

OPAL

The phenomena of the opal attract admirers that are left cold by other solid color gems. Its brilliant flashing of all colors provides a constant changing display. As a gem, the black and white opals are the best varieties, the black with a predominating red, being considered the finest. Black and white, as applied to Opals, indicate relative lightness and darkness; actually they have no color of their own, the many small fragments which form the stone dispelling light in all colors of the spectrum.

Bracelets

THE bracelet has won the popularity it so rightly deserves over a period of ages. It was probably the first personal ornament that was ever worn and it may have been worn before clothing. Savages put them to double use, ornament and defense. In the East, bracelets were worn by men as well as women as insignia of Royalty or other distinction and in Ancient Rome were the favorite ornament. The long sleeved clothes effected by the Middle Ages and Renaissance Period were probably the reason for their scarcity at that time. Since then, however, bracelets have been much in vogue.

By reason of their generous size and shape, bracelets provide unusual scope for purity and beauty of design. Some of our most handsome pieces will be found among them.

Because of its uncanny changes of color, the Opal has had rather contradictory superstitions surrounding it. The ancients considered it a lucky stone and a symbol of hope; later it was thought to be unlucky, but one or the other, the Opal has always been and is to-day one of the most highly esteemed gems.

October's birthstone.

TURQUOISE

Turquoise has had a curious history and curious legends surround it. Mined for 4400 years previous to 1100 B.C., traces of any working after that time are unknown. In 1845, the same mines in the Sinai Peninsula were rediscovered. Turquoise has always enjoyed great popularity, being considered in the Middle Ages, a charm against falls, particularly from horses.

The name Turquoise is the French word for Turkish, indicating that the gem reached Europe through Turkey. It is found in all shades of blue but the finest is known as Persian, a lovely robin's egg shade.

December's birthstone.

LAPIS LAZULI

As old as civilization, Lapis Lazuli has been a favorite gem for jewelry, mosaics and inlay work. Egypt and Babylon made extensive use of it in ancient times, and the early Czars were keen admirers of it.

The finest lapis, a rare deep blue, is increasing in value as its source in Afghanistan approaches exhaustion. Siberian and Chilean lapis, the former the superior, are also highly valued, but flecks and spots of gold and white, and often more serious imperfections, make them somewhat less desirable than the Persian. Since Lapis Lazuli is a very tough gem, it is well adapted to signet rings and other carved jewelry.

The birthstone for December.

AMETHYST

A variety of the earth's most common mineral, quartz amethyst has a long and interesting history. Although inexpensive since its discovery in large quantities, few more lovely gems exist.

Believed by Ancient Greeks to prevent intoxication and the favorite gem of Catherine the Great of Russia, amethyst has also had long connection with religious forms. Its color ranges from pale violet to deep purple. The deeper shades found in Siberia and Uruguay are most valuable, the lighter stones being frequently uneven in color.

It is February's birthstone.

TOURMALINE

Young, in comparison with other gem stones, Tourmaline, unidentified until 1703, offers the most unusual properties of any gem. In addition to including practically every shade of every color and in some stones several, the Tourmaline is hard and

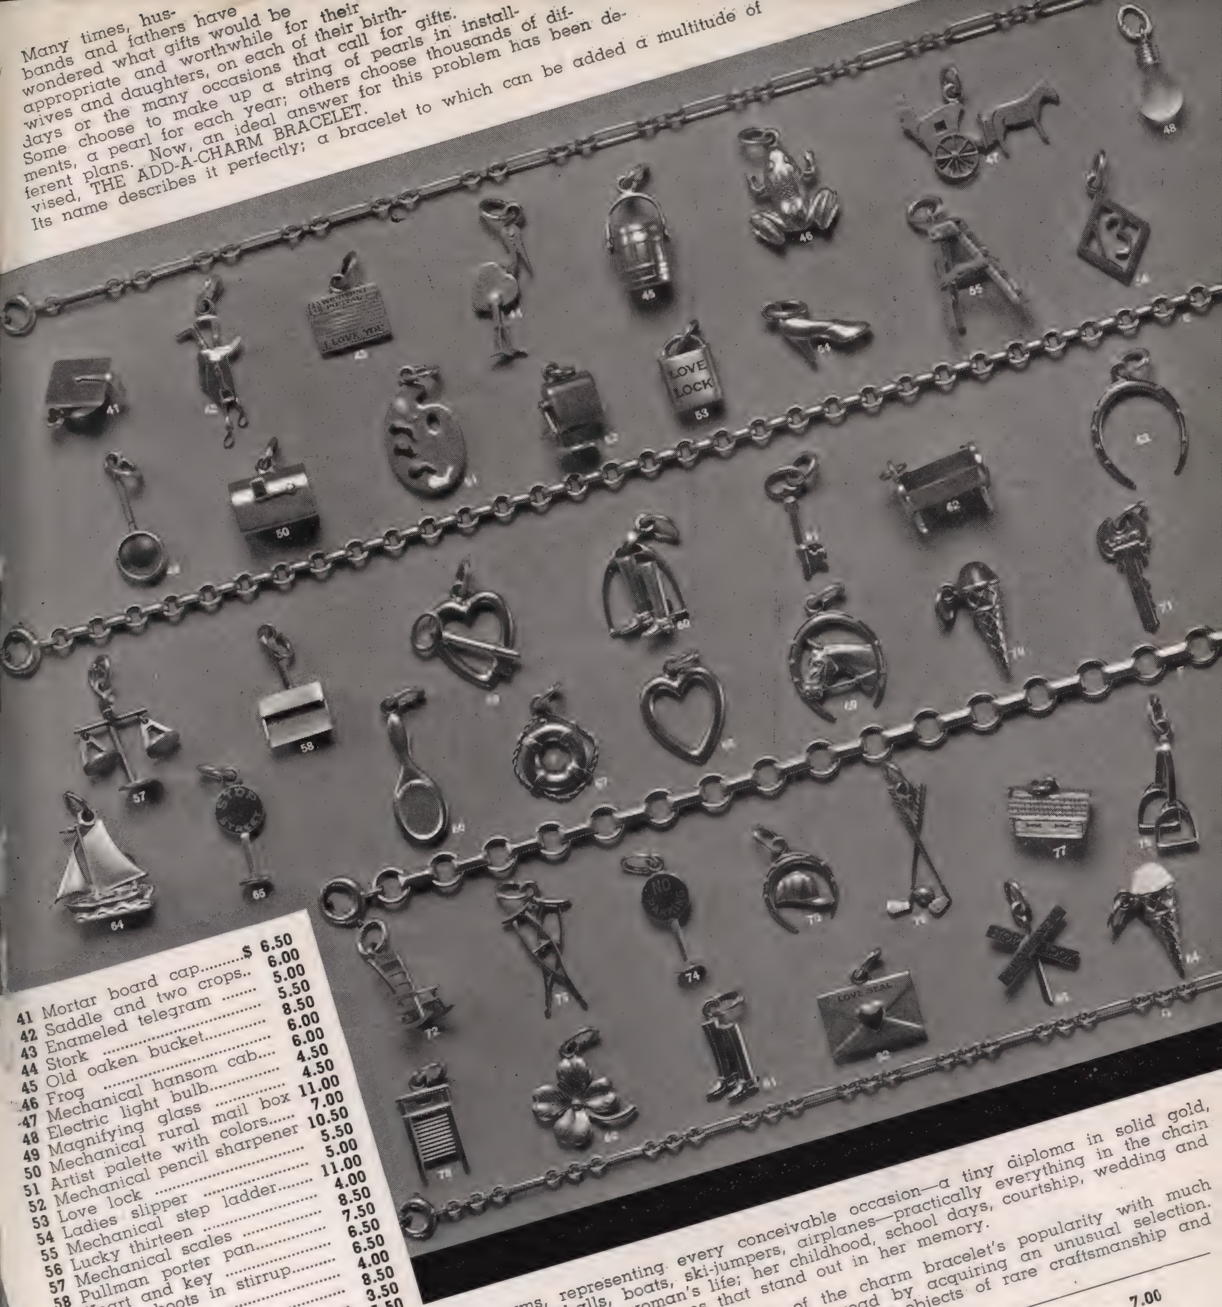
Many times, husbands and fathers have wondered what gifts would be appropriate and worthwhile for their wives and daughters, on each of their birthdays or the many occasions that call for gifts. Some choose to make up a string of pearls in installments, a pearl for each year; others choose thousands of different plans. Now, an ideal answer for this problem has been devised, THE ADD-A-CHARM BRACELET. Its name describes it perfectly; a bracelet to which can be added a multitude of charms, representing every conceivable occasion—a tiny diploma in solid gold, little footballs, boats, ski-jumpers, airplanes—practically everything in the chain of events in a woman's life; her childhood, school days, courtship, wedding and occasions or good times that stand out in her memory.



We have watched the growth of the charm bracelet's popularity with much interest and have anticipated its spread by acquiring an unusual selection. The delicacy of these pieces makes them objects of rare craftsmanship and ingenuity.

The Story of Watches

Fascinatingly intertwined with hopes and ambitions, success and failure, the history of watches and watch making is the history of man's efforts to record the passing of time. It records a steady growth and progress through almost 3000 years of constant experiment that have been rewarded with the remarkable time-pieces we know and use today. The early primitive experiments made use of the phenomena of nature with varying degrees of success. The planetary system, the sun, water, fire and sand all made their contributions, but were not satisfactory for several reasons; the sundial was only as accurate as the changing position of the sun, water clocks were subject to cold weather, and other devices needed constant replenishing or replacing. All of them had a serious fault; they required persistent human attention.

In 996 A.D., Pope Sylvester revolutionized time-keeping with the invention of a mechanical, weight-driven clock. Although woefully erratic itself, this clock was the prelude to rapid steps to perfection that followed Galileo's discovery of the law of the pendulum in the sixteenth century. It is curious to note that the pendulum was not applied to clocks until 100 years or so later for the importance of the pendulum cannot be minimized; it supplies the invariable constant control that is the first essential in accurate time-keeping.

Although the development of clocks had achieved a fair degree of perfection, it remained for one Peter Henlein, a young locksmith of Nuremburg, to produce what was called a "portable clock" in 1840. His genius marked the beginning of watchmaking when he substituted a coiled spring for weights as the motive power of his invention's movement. This principle introduced a series of portable timepieces known from their shape as "Nurenburg Eggs". Made entirely of iron, their excessive weight forced their gentle-folk owners to employ a page to carry them about; their further use by the town watchmen of the period gave the portable clock the name by which we know it—"watch".

Previous to Henlein, there had been abortive attempts to produce a watch. There are records from the time of Queen Elizabeth that mention a "wristlet in which was a clock" but its uncontrollable inaccuracies made it largely ornamental. However, the British made major contributions to the modern watch in the development of the "hairspring" to control the speed of the movement. This was followed several generations later by the invention of the compensated balance wheel, supplying the third essential for accurate time-keeping with a small spring driven movement. The fourth problem, that of ending the annoyance of gradual loss of time as the main spring spent its energy, was solved by the introduction of various winding devices, chains, keys, etc.

Ladies Wrist Watches

(All illustrations are actual size.)

Ladies' wrist watches, fascinating in themselves, are one of the marvels of modern watch-making; such minute movements, such delicate cases and intricate shapes are a challenge to further ingenuity.

The watches illustrated below are an answer to that challenge and they post one of their own in addition; they offer fine movements in cases of beauty and delicacy at unusually moderate prices. It is seldom indeed that these three outstanding qualities are combined.

Men's rings have a history as long as man's, following his progress through the ages as an important adjunct to his daily life. A man's ring was his signature and mark of position, it's stone or metal being carved with his signet or armorial bearings. Although this practiced function has lost its prominence today,

CORAL

Coral lends itself most readily to decorative jewelry, such as cameos, brooches, earrings, etc. Known in numerous shades from white to red, its toughness and softness are ideal for carving. Built in the sea, fine coral is found largely in shallow waters of the Mediterranean.

AMBER

Amber, one of the most ancient gems, is actually fossil resin. Believed by Ancient Greeks to be solidified sunshine, the same clear golden variety is considered the finest today. As its color darkens gradually with age, such old gems are prized by collectors. Other colors of which there are many, do not attract as much interest.

Taken from the Baltic and Mediterranean Sea and mined in Roumania, Upper Burma, its lightness and warmth make it a fine gem for neck ornaments.

SYNTHETIC STONES

The production of synthetic gems which was first developed early in this century is one of the marvels of modern science. The synthetic sapphire, ruby and emerald have reached such a degree of excellence that their manufacture in Europe has become a substantial and profitable industry. Composed of the same essential minerals as the genuine, these synthetic stones have the same hardness, durability and brilliance which produce a fine copy of an original masterpiece.

CULTURED OR CULTIVATED PEARLS

Far from being an imitation, cultured pearls command great respect in the markets of the world. Grown in mollusks in the same fashion as the natural pearl, any difference between them is difficult to distinguish without scientific equipment.

In the cultivation of these gems, an irritant around which a pearl grows is inserted in a mollusk, an operation that requires surgical skill; generally this irritant is a round bit of mother of pearl. This operation complete, it is lowered to its bed in the sea. Years later, the oyster is opened and the full-grown pearl removed.

This great science, developed by the Japanese, has produced many pearls of rare beauty; their value is determined by the same standards as the genuine, lustre, sheen, color and size.

Sport and Dress Jewelry for Men

The last century has seen men's fashions in clothes reduced more and more to a common denominator until, as at present, a man is forced by custom to dress exactly as his fellows and finds that the only place for color on his person is his cravat (and that must be ultra-conservative). But a man is still free to choose takes an excellent polish. Because of these same properties, this gem is often confused with many others, but being relatively inexpensive, Tourmaline can be adapted to the uses of any gem.

A birthstone for October.

TOPAZ

The rare soft appearance of Topaz is but one of the many reasons for its great appeal to gem-lovers. Its clear, delicate tints, hardness and fine polishing qualities make it a most satisfactory stone.

Known as a symbol of friendship, Topaz is almost colorless, pale tints of golden sherry brown being the most common. Other tints, if natural, are rare. Found principally in Russia, California and Brazil, Topaz, when perfectly colorless, is often confused with the diamond, having an almost identical specific gravity.

November's birthstone.

ZIRCON

Zircon, one of the most brilliant gems, has been a high favorite of all civilizations. Hindus include it among their more precious gems and Ancient Greece and Rome held it in high esteem. Although not restricted to any color, the most common type is yellow.

Best known in America to-day is the blue Zircon; coming from Ceylon, Siam and Indo-China, this color is known to be artificial, but rather than detracting from, it enhances the gem's value as the coloring process is a jealously held secret.

SPINEL

Spinel, little appreciated because of its similarity to the ruby and sapphire, is a most interesting gem stone. Found in Burma, Siam, Ceylon, Brazil, India and Afghanistan, its colors range from yellow through pure red and flame to sapphire blue. Because of their similarity, what is known as the Black Prince's Ruby in the King's State Crown in London, is actually spinel.

As its name, which is derived from the Greek word for spark, would indicate, fine spinel is a brilliant, fiery red in color and quite tough, being the fourth hardest gem. As is the case in so many gem stones, spinel was surrounded with a number of superstitions; it was believed to be a remedy for hemorrhages and inflammatory diseases and to exert a calming influence over anger and discord.

JADE

Only recently recognized as precious, jade has been the most highly prized gem of the Chinese for centuries; their work in it is remarkable and more than that, when it is considered that jade is the toughest of gems. Its value is based solely on quality and color, which ranges from white to emerald green. Most esteemed is the semi-transparent white, silver white and emerald or Imperial green found in upper Burma. China has many legends woven about jade. To them, it embodies the five cardinal virtues, charity, modesty, courage, justice and wisdom; when ground and taken with water, the Chinese believe it to be a cure-all for all internal disorders, a giver of strength and prolonged life and, in sufficient quantity, a preventive of decomposition. Western civilization has been quick to appreciate jade and today is making finer and more extensive use of it.

Silverware

SNOW white damask—soft candlelight, gleaming silverware—all requisites to fine dining, combine for one of the delights of any home—a well dressed table. Slim and delicate candlesticks, exquisitely wrought salts and peppers and table silver of regal beauty lend a rare glamour and sense of pride that is peculiar to fine silverware. To a bride, it is more essential than furniture and as a wedding gift, excites an appreciation that is life-long.

The general appreciation of silverware has become an American characteristic — and well it should, for it is an American heritage. Native silversmiths of the 17th and 18th Century made magnificent contributions to art in their handiwork, but more than that their 19th century successors started the first enterprises that made the general use of silverware possible. In fact, at the time of the Civil War, there was more silverware to be found in the young United States than in all of Europe. The great impetus given silverware was caused by the discovery of electro-plating, that is silver plating applied to baser metal by electrically charged silver solutions. Previous to this plating was done by melting together sheets of copper and silver and flattening them under cold rollers until they were thin enough to be worked. The famous Sheffield plate made by the old melting method in Sheffield, England, is now largely found in Museums, but there are accurate reproductions of similar beauty being made today by electroplating. Electroplating allows the shaping of articles before plating and extensive use of machinery.

The manufacturers, whose merchandise is shown in this book, represent the finest traditions of their craft; their names are bywords throughout the world, and the illustrations of their wares speak so eloquently that hardly more can be said. It is with great pride that we present a truly magnificent display of solid and plated silverware that has no peer.

COLONIAL

A tradition is exemplified in this creation of the Concord Silversmiths. New Hampshire craftsmen have forged these pieces by hand in the manner of the early Colonial silversmiths.

The velvety sheen of the silver and the individual touch of a master craftsman make this silver a pleasure to own and use.

INTERNATIONAL STERLING

Pictured her are a few of the patterns made by the International Silver Co.

Beginning with the 1810 pattern, an authentic reproduction of Early American silver, to the last illustration on this page, one will find adaptations of age-old motifs and ornamentations. Fontaine with its regal elegance, Minuet with its well balanced and graceful lines, Trousseau a modern classic designed in todays new spirit of gracious living, Empress with its romantic touch of Empire elegance, smartly modern, Enchantress with its simple reeding and little delicate spirals of blooms, Courtship graceful in line and detail that never grows old, Continental perfectly plain without a single ornament fairly breaths the tempo of today.

Sterling Candelabrum

Correct appointments to a well set table. Delicate candelabrum, salts and peppers and sherbets, all in sterling silver, are the essentials that mark the dividing line between distinction and mediocrity.

AN UNUSUAL OPPORTUNITY

The price of this lovely, graceful Buffet Table is determined by the purchase of flatware shown on the opposite page. A purchase of 26 to 73 pieces reduces its cost from $33.00 to $22.00. A purchase of 74 or more pieces further lowers its price to $16.50, a saving of 50%. The drawer is lined with tarnish-preventing Pamilla cloth, and is blocked to hold 148 pieces.

The combined cost of a full silver service for eight people and this handsome buffet table is $102.50.

EDWARD INLAID

is sterling inlaid

● Silverware to be proud of . . . yet it costs no more than ordinary plate. Here is the story of Inlaid . . . before plating, solid blocks of sterling silver are inlaid deeply at the two wear points. These are fused firmly into the base metal guaranteeing a lifetime of service and beauty.

SNACK SERVER

Chase Table Electrics allow the hostess to be one of her own guests. Instead of being a slave to her kitchen, she can now have much more time for leisurely, healthful, happy living.

Knowledge of the need and the desire for better living prompted the introduction of this line of Table Electrics by Chase. Following the modern idea, Chase designed them simply, practically and in good taste. And, long after the newness of serving "electrical meals" has worn off, the hostess will continue to appreciate the brilliant Chase chromium finish — which never tarnishes, never needs hard polishing.

Engraving

"How to mark one's silver?" The answer is—the way you and your husband like it best. The selection of a suitable initial, or monogram is second only to the choice of your pattern. We will be delighted to submit monogram suggestions for any pattern you have under consideration. If a pattern is elaborate with little plain surface the monogram can be put on the back of the pieces with perfect correctness. While almost any combination of initials is correct, there are reasons why some seem more satisfactory than others. If only one intial is to be used, the first letter of your husband's family name is proper. If a monogram is the choice the initials of your maiden name can be used or those of your own first and last name plus that of the groom's family name. For example supposing you are Doris Jane Carter and you marry William Turner. To use your own initials D.J.C. in a monogram the C would be in the middle. If you use your married initials they would be D. C. T. with T in the middle of the monogram. As to the choice in this matter of initials it seems a pleasant idea to include the groom's initial, since the silver is so much an integral part of the household, rather than the personal possession of the bride.

One pleasant old custom that gives full consideration to the groom is to use the initials of his last name large, and those of the first name of the bride and groom smaller above it connected with a plus sign. Another pleasant form, but one not so commonly used, is the initials of the last name of the bride and groom. Both of these methods give added heirloom value to beautiful silver.

One of the most elegant forms of marking silver is with the groom's family crest. Not only does this traditional insignia give added beauty to any piece of silver, but it gives the immediate feeling of an inherited possession.

Once the initials to be used have been decided upon, our engraving studio will prove helpful in the equally important matter of designing a monogram in perfect harmony with your silver.

The Story of Watches

American watch making had more than its share of difficulties before the industry started its great march to leadership. The early manufacturers were more or less stymied by foreign competition which forced their hand-made products out of the market with considerably lower prices. This situation persisted until Aaron Dennison, by manufacturing interchangeable parts in 1849, was able to produce a reliable watch to sell at a price that compared with the current variety of imports.

Since then American watch-making has made the progress that typifies America; incessant research, incessant experiment is still going forward to improve and refine a product that already seems as perfect as human ingenuity can devise.

The care of your watch is of utmost importance. Entrust it only to workmen who are absolutely trustworhty and capable. Our watch department is capable of telling you exactly what your watch needs. If necessary we will overhaul it completely, replacing the worn parts, polishing the case, refinishing the dial, and putting on a new strap or cord attachment. It is returned to you looking like new with the movement in perfect condition and guaranteed for another year of active and accurate service.

Men's pocket watches should be serviced every 12 to 18 months; strap watches every 8 to 12 months; ladies wrist watches every 6 to 8 months, depending on the size of the watch.

Here are several unusual facts about your watch that will prove very interesting.

There are over 200 individual parts in your watch. The screws that are used, are so tiny that 2,000 can be placed into an ordinary thimble. It takes a half million of them to make a single pound.

The vital parts in your watch must be accurate to one ten thousandth of an inch. To insure perfect accuracy, parts are enlarged up to 150 times their actual size and projected on a screen for checking.

The balance wheel in a timepiece travels 3733 miles in a single year, a distance greater than across the United States from New York to San Francisco.

Part of the mechanism of your watch strikes 18,000 beats an hour, over 150,000,000 beats a year. These parts of the escapement, the fork and pallet regulae the vibration of the fast moving balance wheel.

The time required to produce a watch is from 9 to 14 months.

The delicate scales used in weighing watch parts are so sensitive that a pencil mark on a piece of tissue will tip them out of balance.

The hairspring in your watch is made of steel worth about $5.00 per pound. One pound of steel makes more than eight miles of hairspring worth over $100,000.00. Converting steel into hairsprings is the most expensive mechanical process in the world.

Do not let your watch break down from overwork. Have it serviced regularly.

If it stops, bring it to us, don't shake or jar it trying to start it.

You should not wear your watch if the crystal is broken, loose or out. Dirt will seep into the movement.

Should you accidently get your watch wet, fill it full of alcohol or oil, preferably kerosene as rust forms quickly and may ruin the movement.

Don't expect a wrist watch to equal the timekeeping of a pocket watch; a pocket watch is for accuracy, a wrist watch for convenience.

Don't try to regulate your watch yourself. You may damage it.

It is not necessary to wind your watch several times a day. Wind it regularly, preferably in the morning. Wind fully; overwinding is impossible.

Don't fail to call on us at anytime for advice regarding your watch. We are always happy to render this service.

Precious Metal

A discussion of the precious metals used in jewelry would seem at first consideration to be mere repetition of obvious properties; the uses of gold, silver and platinum are familiar to everyone and their distinguishing features are readily recognized. But there are interesting and relatively obscure facts concerning these metals that are of genuine interest. Following will be found a brief resumé of each metal and its treatment for use in jewelry and silverware.

The word "Sterling" represents the best known and most respected marking in use today. Pure silver alone is too soft for every day use. Copper is the metal commonly used to give "Sterling" its added stiffness and wearing qualities. "Sterling" is often referred to as solid silver, and it is composed of 92½% silver and 7½% copper.

The Name "Sterling" Is a Contraction of the Word "Easterling"

> In the 12th Century five free towns were banded together in the eastern part of Germany under the name of the Hanseatic League. These towns were free not only to make their own laws, but also to issue their own currency. When trading with English merchants they gave silver coins in payment for British cattle, sheep, grain and other products. The British soon learned that these coins, which they referred to as the coins of the Easterlings, were always dependable. It is said that Henry II employed some of these Easterlings to improve and standardize the English coinage which had become debased. The standard adopted is probably accounted for by the system of weights used. It was based on 11 troy ounces, 2 pennyweights of fine silver and 18 pennyweights of alloy. The word "alloy" was used to designate the base metal. The original designation Easterlings, was later abbreviated to "Sterlings" and the same standard was adopted under the name "Sterling" for solid silverware.

Today the term "Sterling" is frequently used to describe the high standing of a man's character, a superior quality, or in many other ways to indicate perfection or genuineness.

There is something fascinatingly beautiful about sterling silver, which improves with age and use. No other metal or alloy has ever been found which duplicates its color and lustre. Attempts have been made for years to imitate silver by alloying various metals and more recently by covering base metals or even sterling silver itself, with a film or plate of another metal, but all these attempts have failed. One has only to compare a sterling silver article with one of these imitations—the difference is pronounced.

Sterling Silver stands alone in quality, prestige, intrinsic value, utility and beauty.

KARAT is a measure of fineness—24 karat is fine gold. One karat equals 1/24 (.0417). Thus 14 karat gold is 14/24 fine gold and the balance (10/24 alloy. The usual alloy metals are silver, copper and zinc. Nickel is used in white gold.

COLORS OF GOLD—Yellow, Green, Red and White—are produced by variations in the alloy. Silver and zinc tend to give a green color; copper—red and nickel—white.

GOLD FILLED is made by joining a layer (or layers) of gold alloy to a base metal alloy and then rolling or drawing to the thickness required.

ROLLED GOLD PLATE is the same as gold filled, but usually of lower quality.

GOLD ELECTROPLATE is usually made by electrolytically depositing fine gold on base metal.

The history of gold and silver quality standards goes back to the early uses of these metals as money. Legal regulations governing the marking of gold jewelry began in England in the year 1239 and in one form or another have existed ever since in practically all civilized countries.

Penalties for violation of these laws have varied with prevailing conditions. History records that in England in the year 1397, a report was made on the false and counterfeit stamps of two goldsmiths who were sentenced to be placed in the pillory at Westminster with their ears nailed to it and a ticket over their heads upon which their offences were written. From Westminster they were brought to the pillory at Cheapside, where each offender had an ear cut off, after which they were conducted to Foster Lane to the bleak prison. In addition to all this disgrace and suffering, they had to pay a fine of 10 marks. This was typical of punishment in most countries for similar offenses. In later years, punishment consisted of fine and imprisonment up to one year, or confiscation of all articles falsely stamped, plus fines and a forfeiture of the right to stay in business after repeated violations.

In many foreign countries there is provision for the government regulation of Hall marks which are used in connection with quality marks as an added safeguard.

The established principle even in early days was that the buyer had only himself to blame if he purchased an unmarked piece of jewelry which proved to be inferior to the quality claimed. On the other hand, if an article stamped under the provisions of a government law was found to be less than the quality indicated, the seller was felt to have abused a privilege, violated a law, and endangered the reputation of the trade. Stamping laws in the United States are of comparatively recent origin. They go beyond those of some other countries and regulate the marking of gold in combination with other metals. This permits the sale, at lower cost, of articles such as gold filled and rolled gold plate which have been produced under the safeguard of quality standards.

Every reputable retail jeweler has a fundamental interest in this subject, because his most treasured heritage is the confidence that the public has in him.

Platinum is the most costly of precious metals used by the jeweler; it is also of essential importance in chemical laboratory research and manufacturing. Its first use in jewelry outside of the countries where platinum is found, was for settings forming a background for diamonds, for which the white color of the metal made is especially suitable. From this, the use of platinum spread to making the entire piece of jewelry containing diamonds; of platinum; then the association of this metal with articles of very highest value brought about its adoption for making articles which do not contain precious stones, such as watch cases for men, plain rings and so on.

Platinum is white in color; some persons express it "grey-white"—others say "blue-white." Pure platinum is too soft to use for jewelry without alloying it with the much harder metal of the same group, iridium.

The better jewelers have accepted 90 parts of platinum to 10 parts of iridium as standard. When alloyed in these proportions with iridium it is worth from 25% to 35% more than Platinum in its pure state.

Glossary

|---|---|
| ALLOY | A metal resulting from the mixture of two or more metals. |
| APPLIED BORDER | A cast or rolled wire border or edge soldered on an article. |
| ASSAYING | The process of determining the fineness/or the constituents of a metal or alloy. |
| BRIGHT FINISH | The finish that imparts to Sterling ware a highly polished, mirror-like surface. |
| BUTLER FINISH | The care of silverware was one of the duties assigned to the English Butler. In the course of years of hand rubbing, the silverware took on a distinct lustre which to-day in modern Sterling ware is simulated by a process of manufacture known as "Butler Finish." This finish is sometimes called Grey Finish or French Grey Finish. Each may show a varying shade of soft finish, but both fall under the general category of butler finish as here described. The finish on Sterling ware is produced by buffing, or polishing the article with different kinds of abrasives. The various terms applied to soft finish are more particularly a trade convenience to indicate the abrasive used rather than to describe standard shades or tones. |
| CAST BORDER | An applied border made of cast silver. |
| CASTING | The process of pouring molten metal into molds and so reproducing the models from which the molds were made. These reproductions are called castings. |
| CHASING | Decoration done by hand with small tools and punches forced into the metal with tappings by a hammer. When flowers, scrolls, etc., are simply impressed into flat surfaces it is called Flat Chasing. When the ornamentation is brought up in high relief by driving out the metal from the inside and then modelled back into detailed form it is called Repoussé Chasing. |
| COIN SILVER | Silver assaying 900 parts pure silver to every 1000 parts. U. S. coins are made of this quality which it will be noted is 25 points lower than the Sterling standard. |
| CUTLERY | Knives with a cutting edge, (e.g., dinner, dessert, carving knives.) |
| DESSERT KNIVES | The trade name for knives which correspond in size to the Dessert Fork. A better term would perhaps be "small dinner" or "luncheon" size. |
| DIE CUTTING OR SINKING | The process by which a design or pattern is cut out of a piece of steel to form a "die" from which a quantity of similar articles can be stamped out or impressed. |
| DINNER WARE | The general term applied to dishes, plates, bowls, pitchers, salt shakers, candlesticks, tea sets and other hollow articles, as distinguished from knives, forks, spoons, toiletware, etc. (See Hollow Ware.) |
| DUTCH SILVER | Silverware imported from Holland. Generally very decorative and cast of silver metal very much lower than the Sterling Standard. |
| ELECTRO-PLATING | This process was introduced about the year 1842 and is used in making silver plated wares. By this process a layer of silver is electrically deposited on a base metal. (See Silver Plate.) |

| EMBOSSING | The process of decorating by striking or impressing the metal into a die with force. |
| ENGINE TURNING | The process of decorating through means of a cutting tool controlled by a craftsman following the design which is applied to the silver from a master pattern or stencil. This type of decoration, generally speaking, is confined to toiletware and novelties. |
| ENGRAVING | A process of hand decoration produced by cutting into the surface of the metal with engraving tools. |
| ETCHING | A process of decoration produced by what might be properly called "chemical engraving". The silver is covered with a protecting coating through which the desired design is cut and the design is eaten into the silver by nitric acid. |
| FINE SILVER | The Element Silver—Pure Silver—1000 Fine. |
| FINISHING | The general term applied to the various processes of polishing silver. |
| FLATWARE OR FLAT SILVER | The trade name for Knives, Forks, Spoons, etc. |
| GERMAN SILVER | A term used some years ago as interchangeable with Nickel Silver. See Nickel Silver. |
| GILDING | The process of Electro-plating a layer of pure gold on another metal. |
| H. H. | Means Hollow Handle. Cutlery and many fancy pieces are made by attaching a Sterling handle to the blade, tines, etc. These handles are made of two hollow halves and soldered together. |
| HALL MARK | The official mark of the Goldsmith's Company or other assay office or "Hall" in England, stamped on articles of gold or silver to indicate their purity. In America the Hall Mark is the word "Sterling" accompanied by the name or mark of a reputable manufacturer. |
| HAMMERED SILVER | A form of decoration resulting from repeated taps on the surface of the metal with a light hammer. |
| HAND WROUGHT SILVER | An article shaped and decorated from a flat piece of silver by a craftsman using only hand tools and such other non-mechanical aids as facilitate the use and manipulation of such hand tools. In the production of much so-called "hand wrought" silver the identical mechanical processes used in the initial shaping of the article in the normal course of silverware production are followed—and in these cases the term "hand wrought" is incorrectly applied. |
| HOLLOW WARE | Sometimes spelled HOLLOWARE. See Dinner Ware. |
| INSULATORS | Heat resisting substances inserted between the handle and the body of such articles as kettles, tea pots, etc. |
| KNURLING | An ornament cut originally into steel rolls and then impressed from these rolls into the silver as borders on bowls, dishes, etc. |
| LAPPED BORDER | An article is said to have a rolled edge or lapped border when the metal has been rolled over the edge and spun under to give the effect of a rounded edge. |
| MIRROR FINISH | A term applied to highly polished stainless steel blades. |
| MOTIF | The dominant feature of a design. |

|---|---|
| MOUNTS | Small pieces of ornamental metal. These may be ornamented wires, casts or stamped silver soldered on the article as decorations. |
| NICKEL SILVER | Contains no silver at all. A composition of copper, nickel and zinc. |
| OXIDIZING | Method of accentuating and enhancing the beauty of ornament by the application of an oxide which darkens the metal wherever applied. Some methods of cleaning silver will remove this oxide. |
| PATINA | The finish or surface texture. As applied to silver it refers to the soft lustrous finish the metal acquires with years of usage. |
| PIERCING | A form of decoration produced by cutting away parts of the metal with cutting dies, punching tools, or in the case of hand piercing, with a thin steel blade with fine teeth. |
| RAW EDGE | Term applied to Hollow Ware pieces the edge of which has not been turned over or mounted with a border. |
| SHEFFIELD PLATE | The original substitute for Sterling Silver, now displaced by Silver Plate. It was made by fusing sheet silver onto copper, rolling and manufacturing into hollow ware. The discovery of the electrolytic process of depositing silver on a base metal made it possible to produce articles of similar quality to Sheffield at lower cost and so the Sheffield Plate process was virtually abandoned (circa 1840). To-day, most fine pieces of "Old Sheffield" are found in museums and private collections and virtually none of it is available in the commercial market. Much electro-plated ware is erroneously advertised or otherwise referred to as "Sheffield Plate". In the purchase of "Sheffield Plate", be sure of the reliability and integrity of your dealer. |
| SILVER PLATE | Articles made of a non-precious metal on which is deposited pure silver by the Electro-plating Process. (See Electro-plating.) |
| SILVER-SMITHING | General term applied to the various crafts involved in making articles of silver. With advancing specialization in the manufacture of Sterling ware, the term has narrowed down to cover specifically the crafts involved in shaping, fitting, and assembling the various parts of an article into a complete piece. |
| SPINNING | A method of forming or shaping pieces of silver hollow ware by revolving a flat disc of silver over a piece of wood or steel which has been made in the shape the silver is to assume. By means of a tool, the silver is spread over the rotating form, finally achieving the desired shape. |
| STAINLESS STEEL | An alloy composed mainly of steel, nickel, and chromium, having generally greater strength than ordinary steel and possessing unusually high resistance to corrosion, tarnish, or stain by air, water and most acids. |
| STERLING SILVER | The word "STERLING" is the best known and most respected marking in use to-day. Pure silver alone is too soft for everyday use. Copper is the metal commonly used to give "STERLING" its added stiffness and wearing qualities. STERLING is often referred to as solid silver. It is composed of 925 parts pure silver in every 1000—this proportion never varies—it is fixed by law. |
| TOILET WARE (Dresser Silver) | The general term applied to combs, brushes, mirrors, manicure sets, and other dresser and vanity accessories. |
| WHITE METAL | A mixtue of tin, antimony and copper in varying proportions. |
